

In a noisy world, it is sometimes difficult to hear the voice of the heart, to slow down enough to listen. Very few things on the outside encourage us to do so. It's all about being busy, setting and accomplishing goals, getting ahead in life. We are led to believe that we will finally find serenity or peace only when we retire.

Prem Rawat, also called Maharaji, spends his life traveling the world, offering a message of hope and peace.

But a different message has prevailed through many civilizations: "What you are looking for is within you." Prem Rawat, also called Maharaji, repeated this message recently to an audience of over 130,000 people who had come to hear him speak about the possibility of finding peace within, at Nehru Stadium in Delhi, India.

"You are the center of your universe," he said. "In the center of this universe, where you are, there is magnificence. In that center is joy, beauty, love—everything. And I can help you get in touch with that center."

Prem Rawat spends his life traveling the world, sharing this message. He has been speaking to public audiences about the possibility of finding peace within since he was three years old. At the age of thirteen, he left his native India to respond to invitations from every continent and has addressed more than 5 million people from Lisbon to Japan, South Africa to Finland, Canada to Fiji. To make his message available to people wherever they live, he makes full use of satellite technology, DVDs, and the Internet. Today, his message is available in more than 80 countries.

He offers his help to those who wish to find peace within. To those who desire it, he offers Knowledge, four simple techniques that enable an individual to focus within to find that peace—a peace that already lies within each and every person, waiting to be felt. Knowledge, he says, is independent from and yet compatible with all religions.

This summer, as he has every year since 1971, Prem Rawat will address audiences in many European cities.

His message differs from others in that what he offers is an experience that needs to be felt, rather than just a set of beliefs or principles to be intellectually accepted. What he offers is easily accessible to everyone, regardless of age, social background, culture, beliefs, or education.

“I offer a way to connect to life inside,” he says. “The purpose of this Knowledge is to gain access to the beauty and simplicity that lies within, to feel the vibrancy of this life as it manifests inside. I do not bring new information. I remind people of what they already know, deep inside. This is not about religion, nor about spirituality. In fact, for this, there is no label. This is about existence and about finding fulfillment. You must be the judge of whether you are fulfilled or not. Only you can do that. Somebody else can’t do that for you.”

For Prem Rawat, there is a path within that leads to true freedom. He has been called by many a master, a teacher, a friend. Beyond the words used to describe him, his aim is to help people find their own freedom in life: “What I offer is about walking the path of existence on one’s own feet. Each of us is the master that determines where these feet will take us. It should not be somebody else’s ideas. Each of us has the freedom to listen to our own heart. It’s all there for each one of us to turn within, to accept the call of the heart, wanting to be fulfilled.”
